

A method for automated control of a steam turbine includes affecting by oil pressure from the pump the rate controller and the slide of the servo-drive of the control valves of the turbine slide. The effect of the oil pressure of the pump is performed directly on the control slide by special pneumatic valve – rate controller, this is automatically controlled by the computer signal.