

A multilayer structural panel with cell structure contains inner layer in the form of honeycomb structure, which is made of dense resin-impregnated paper and filled with volumetric filler in the form of polyurethane foam with addition of ground basalt. Inner layer is located between external metal shells. In this case, between external shell and inner layer a layer of basalt or its components is additionally located.