

Method for increasing dissipation ability of electrolytes by coppering with magnetic field comprises of treating the electrolyte with non-uniform magnetic field, with loading samples for coating, setting calculated current intensity.