

The method for modelling the stricture of the common bile duct consists in deforming the wall of the duct by demuscularization. With this aim in view the muscular layer is removed circularly extending in length for no less than one and half diameter of the duct.