

A method for manufacturing of current taps for pasted electrode used in lead-acid accumulators includes crystallization of lead melt on the drum in the form of solid latticed band, cooling of obtained band and mechanical treatment. After forming the band should be cooled up to 60-75° C and pressed out at sizing rolls that transform the form of conductors and frames cut in hexagonal form. The invention provides obtaining of latticed band of enhanced strength.