

The proposed electric-discharge excimer lamp contains electrodes, a gas-discharge tube, a blocking capacitor, and a high-frequency alternating-voltage source. The gas-discharge tube is filled with mix of xenon and chlorine. In the gas-discharge tube, longitudinal high-frequency discharge is generated at the optimal content of the gas mix components that provides the specified partial pressure of each of the gas mix components.