

The proposed device for deleting records on a hard magnetic disk contains an oscillatory circuit, which contains two inductance coils, which are shunted by a damping diode, and a capacitor, which is concurrently connected to both the inductance coils by a two-position switch. The device has small dimensions and ensures complete deletion of records on a hard magnetic disk by destruction of the structure of the surface layer of the disk.