

Method of manufacturing the bushings, supports and other similar parts including the use of the glass-reinforced polypropylene in the form of separate billets, granules or crumb with their heating and transfer into the mould for the realization of the moulding process with obtaining of the monolithic connection of the prescribed form.