

A method for antifungal and antibacterial treatment of leathers involves percolation of chromed semi-finished product with antiseptic. At that as antiseptic used is polymineral product obtained from natural minerals of nonmetallic fossils.