

A protective net comprises of metal wires and textile threads included to the complex cord forming the structure of knitted structure. The metal wires are winded in free way over the textile thread with formation of additional protective structure made of prominent spiral stitches on the working surface of the net.