

The proposed method for determining content of detritus in soil with common grain-size classification consists in bolting the sample of dry soil through a sieve with holes of 1 mm in order to remove indecomposable organic particles, and then separating the detritus from the sediment of mineral substances by a sieve with holes of 0.25 mm.