

Polymeric jerrican contains housing equipped with pouring neck located in the upper part of the housing, and hollow handle, which is connected with the housing. In accordance with the utility model, the housing and the handle are made of polymeric material as a unit, the handle is located from the side of housing opposite to the vertical axis of neck, the handle of jerrican is made in the form of two symmetrical recesses located on the opposite lateral faces of the housing, and the mentioned recesses are intended for introduction of fingers of man's hand.