

The proposed plastic card contains a substrate with transparent polymeric film protective coating. Information is recorded on the substrate by laser beam acting on the substrate through the protective coating. On the substrate and the protective coating, relief elements are provided that would change the laser beam direction when the information is recorded.