

The proposed method for determining the expectation value of a random process provides a possibility to reduce the volume of a priory information on random process parameters and increase the accuracy of determining the expectation value of a non-Gaussian random process with the variable probability distribution asymmetry factor.