

The invention relates to thermoplastic polypropylene compositions, having elastomeric properties, and to the method for obtaining thereof. They are obtained in the form of spheroidal particles, having specific fluidity and apparent density characteristics..