

The invention relates to the engineering and can be used on the drop wires of residential and administrative buildings, central heat points of district heating systems.

The method provides for the obtainment of choking from the light brewer's malt, saccharification of mash, its filtration and boiling of mash with the hop and with the concentrate of kvass mash.