

The invention relates to the essential-oil industry, in particular to the methods and devices for the extraction of essential oil from the plant raw material, for example, from the hop.

The method consists in treatment of the raw material by the vapor, condensation of escaping vapor, and isolation of essential oil from the distillate.