

The invention relates to food industry, in particular to production of mineral waters and can be used in medicine for cure of chronic gastroenterological, urological diseases and diabetes. A method is performed by addition of conserving agent to native water. As conserving agent solution of hydrochloric acid is used, by which concentration of hydrogen ions is bring up to pH 4-5.