

The charging device for power pack contains a processor connected to the device for temperature measurement and a current controller stepping down the charging current level. The invention relates to battery charging systems supplying the current to a charged battery, the value being defined by the battery temperature level.