

Method for tobacco puff-off provides cooling tobacco by way of leaking gaseous carbon dioxide at the temperature less than the temperature of saturation of gaseous carbon dioxide. The invention relates to production of tobacco products, namely, to the method of tobacco processing.