

The invention relates to the bending device consisting of male part with the pins, and the female part corresponding to the male part and having grooves. The grooves are made with the profiles from elastic material placed in them. Profiles are preliminarily extended and fixed in the grooves by means of T-shaped tips, with which they are equipped.