

The present invention relates to a method for separating sheets of paper stacked in reams of sheets by applying the ream against a curved surface in order to separate the sheets of this ream, especially printed sheets, preferably loan papers, and devices for implementing this method.