

The invention relates to the method for decision making of cutover for mobile subscribers in the mobile radio net with sets of basic stations. The purpose of invention is reached for account of cutover additional to the static decision taking into account mobile radio subscriber speed, from the radio service area of one macrocell to the service area of one or several other macrocells.