

The invention relates to heat development assemblies, in particular to heat development assembly that has deflection paddles for deflection of components of liquid flow that flows by such heat development assembly. It can be used in active zones of nuclear power reactors.