

A method for purification of wastewater is based on the treatment with nitric acid at high temperature and under pressure. The invention relates to purification of wastewater, in particular, to a method for purification of wastewater from aluminium ions and organic carbon.