

The retractor contains the frame with the holders and the pinches. The holders are capable of being displaced radially. The pinches are attached to the holders and may rotate around the holders in the plane of the frame. The frame is designed rectangular with the longitudinal through slits for the screws of the fixation units for the holders. The holders are able of rotating in the plane of the frame.