

A method for prevention of hypercholesterolemia consists in influence on the liver area by a physiotherapy factor. The influence is carried out by the low intensity laser radiation daily for five days. The invention relates to medicine, mainly to physiotherapy and may be used for treatment of different diseases flowing on a hypercholesterolemia background.