

The invention relates to the branch of electrical engineering. The system consists of three rods, two butt and two lateral frameworks. The rod and framework stacks consist of the same groups of steel plate layers. The system plates have the form of trapezium with angles of 45° at the larger foundation and one pointed end cut in perpendicular to the midline of trapezium.