

A device of phytosanitary control contains detectors of leaf temperature, soil temperature, soil moisture, illumination intensity, precipitation, connected with the inlet of a measuring converter. The invention relates to devices of phytosanitary control in agriculture to control conditions, in which diseases and pests develop, and to prevent of the possibility of affecting and damaging the yield by them in the course of growing and preserving.