

The open electricity distribution plant for average voltage substations contains cells formed by insulator relay racks. The invention relates to electrical power engineering, basic construction elements of electrical substations. The preferred branch of use is open electricity distribution plants with voltage 35kV.