

A method for manufacture of friction articles provides for coating threads with polymeric material, laying the threads into a briquette for formation of the billet of article, its molding for producing the article and its thermal and mechanical processing. The invention relates to machine building, manufacture of friction articles of the type of brake linings, clutch rings etc, which are used in brake and friction mechanisms.