

The invention relates to constructional materials that can be used as binding material at fettling of cladding of engineering structures of chemical and metallurgical industry in conditions of high temperature exposure. A polymeric composition contains epoxide resin, silicone and curative. Additionally it contains kieselgur powder as compound product and polyethylenepolyamine as curative.