

Quick-split hitch of earth-moving machine includes frame that consists of two beams and two back holders attached to basic machine, suspension that is connected to boom and is made of two connected to each other posts and beams. The frame is equipped with front holders attached to inner sides of its beams, those are made with onlays that have openings turned to outer sides of beams of frame for connection by means of fixation elements to suspension. The invention relates to earth-moving transportation machines where removable suspension of executive equipment is provided.