

The diffused-air aerator contains the dispergator in the form of porous pipe of ring cross section, attached to the air duct by the upper front part. The air duct is made in the form of horizontal pipeline and hardly connected with the upper front part of dispergator. The invention relates to the mechanisms for pneumatic aeration of liquids and can be used particularly in purification of waste waters in aeration constructions.