

The invention relates to methods for isolation of high purity indole from coal tar pitch fractions and can be used in chemical-recovery industry. A process for indole isolation from coal tar pitch fractions provides for extraction by means of polar solvent. Aqueous solution of ethylene diamine is used as polar solvent.