

Method for determination of oil admixtures in gases by means of indicator pipes includes sorption of oil admixtures that is carrier out in separate sorption shell. The invention relates to analytical chemistry and can be used for determination of oil admixtures in gases as aerosol and vapors.