

The invention relates to crushing of materials, namely to the mills of vibration action used in chemical, food, concentrating, construction and other fields of industry. A vibrating mill contains a grinding chamber, an unbalanced shaft with supports of rotation, shock absorbers and a frame. The grinding chamber is installed on unbalanced shaft with possibility of free running and is equipped with a counterweight.