

The invention relates to the field of medicina, in particular to the practice of men impotence treatment. An erector comprises the fixative and supporting elements, connected with each other, and fastener.