

The invention relates to the branch of electrical engineering and is meant for pulse supply of gas tubes, mainly of high and superhigh pressure used in lighting units.

The method includes cycling to its leads, the durability being determined by build time of plasma glowing to maximum.