

Invention relates to metallurgy, in particular to the rolling production during cooling of moving rolled metal. Method includes the supply of water-air jets on the surface of rolled metal through the system of collectors with nozzles united into the groups, located symmetrically above the roller conveyer in parallel to the direction of motion of rolled metal.