

The invention relates to lighting engineering namely to starting devices providing for switching on and off two- and four-electrode tubes.

The starter comprises a evacuated balloon with evacuated balloon with current leads pressure-tight adjusted in it and a temperature-sensing element made as a plate where a moving contact on the end is rigidly mounted forming a stationary contact-terminal pair electrically connected with one of current leads.