

An invention relates to the production of building materials and products, more specifically – to filler materials for concretes and processes for their preparation.

The raw mixture comprises active siliceous material of alkali hydroxide metal and water. It additionally contains mineral filler, and as active siliceous material - silica rock or siliceous material of technogenic origin.