

The invention relates to the branch of transforming equipment and can be used for battery charge.

The converter comprises a power rectifier connected by its cathode to one of output terminals, a peak limiter consisting of a sensing element and a key element controlled by it connected in parallel to a rectifier output.