

Invention relates to the equipment for molding and production of articles made of ceramic materials, in particular, to the general arrangement and planning of installations for production of construction articles and can be used in the industry of construction articles.

Installation contains the systems of preparation of molding mixture, molding of articles and thermal working by heat-aggregate and circulation loop of heat-transfer agent located in the technological sequence and connected together.