

The invention relates to the industry of building materials, in particular to the machines for production of building articles from concrete mixtures using vibration. Equipment contains a movable gantry, a mould without bottom with a vibration exciter fastened thereon, a tightening weight for mixture, a mechanism of the mould displacement from the lower position to the upper one and return.