

A drive contains a crank disk, a converting mechanism, which spider is hingedly connected with the crank disk and a crosspiece, and levers which rotation axes are located vertically, connected hingedly with the upper and lower knives.