

Invention relates to metallurgy, in particular to the continuous casting of ingots of square and bloom cross section. Method includes supply to the surface of the ingot of water-air mixture with adjustment of its flow rate and change of the ratio of parts of water and air and their pressures lengthwise of the liquid phase of ingot.