

The invention relates to the biology, the veterinary, and the medicine, namely to the preparations of the biologically active substances from the tissues containing the complex of the water-soluble polypeptides and may be used in the biotechnology for production of the biologically active substances isolated and purified from the tissues of the muckworms. The preparation possesses the regenerative activity due to the complex of the water-soluble polypeptides.