

The invention relates to agricultural engineering, in particular to the machines for control of diseases and pests of agricultural crops, and weeds. A plant sprayer contains spraying units, oriented transversely to the direction of movement thereof, and conical jackets for catching active liquid, located in opposite to the spraying units and connected with a suction pipe.