

The invention relates to the mining industry, in particular to the technology of separation of bulk materials. A vibration screen includes a frame with supporting beams, an elastic sifting surface made from modular elements, which lateral sides are bent back at right angle and are fixed in the grooves formed by the walls of supporting beams.